During the game (DEFA Team only)

When the first aider / therapist enters the field of play, the therapist will automatically gather between the home and away dugouts and wait for their assistance to be called upon. If they are called onto the pitch, they will bring all medical equipment onto the field of play. The signal for the therapist to enter the pitch is hands crossed above the head. The therapist will take the lead role in the initial communication with the first aiders.

There should be a treatment plan agreed between all parties either to treat or transfer the patient immediately. If life support treatment is commenced on pitch, the coaching staff at the facility will maintain a perimeter around the player for dignity and privacy.

If an ambulance is required, a member of staff should make an appropriate call to 999, asking for an ambulance and informing them of the incident, details of the player and location of the incident. A member of the coaching staff should then make their way to the main gates to direct the ambulance to the scene of the accident.

The caretaker should also be informed to open necessary gates and inform the caretakers that they need to be made available on Weston Road to direct the ambulance towards the main gates.

First aid equipment will consist of a general first aid kit. If no parent/ guardian available and player requires treatment at hospital the team coach will accompany.

During the game (Away Team only)

The away team will be responsible for all medical treatments (including pitch side care) needed for their players. In the event of a life threatening emergency the away team must signal the home team sports therapist who will take the lead informing them of any allergies or medical issues that could complicate the treatment.
